Here's some fun news for all the people who couldn't afford to shell out $1,500 for Google Glass a few weeks ago Æ, Æ one website has found that the combined cost of all Glass' parts only comes out to around $80. Google, unsurprisingly, is denying the claims. The depressing news comes from the folks at Techinsight's Teardown.com business, who dissembled a pair of Google Glass and determined the price of each of its individual parts. We were surprised to see how inexpensive each component was: the battery was $1.14; the camera was $5.66; the actual glass was $3.00. The most expensive individual piece was the processor, which still only came in at a measly $13.96.
